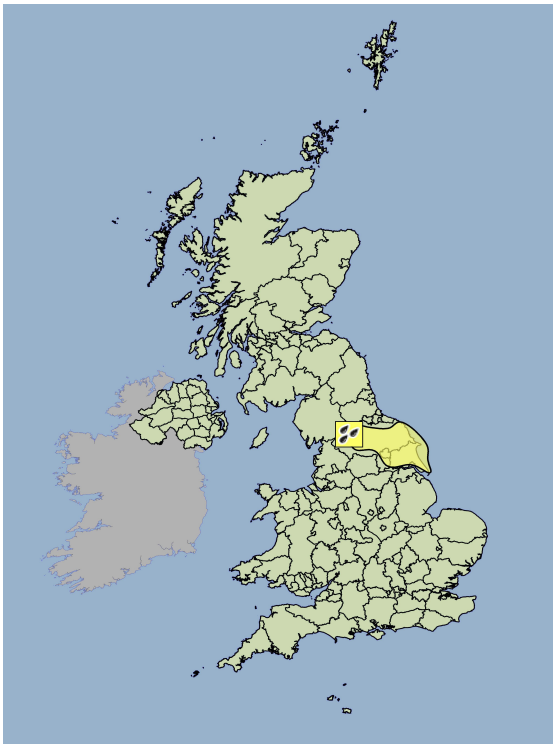
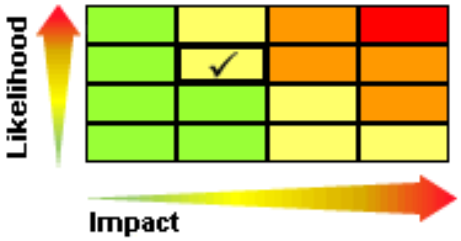
National Severe Weather Warning Service





CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment
The frontal zone bringing rain to eastern England on Tuesday will move northwards on Tuesday night to become slow-moving across north east England during Wednesday. Rainfall accumulations of over 30 mm in places may cause some minor flooding from rivers or from surface water.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 04:00 on Wed, 28th May 2014 until 23:55 on Wed, 28th May 2014

Rain will become persistent and heavy across parts of north east England on Wednesday, particularly across North and East Yorkshire. The public should be aware of the potential for disruption due to localised flooding .
